

New Hearing Asked on Southland Gas Program

SUNDAY AT THE BOWL . . . Adrian Rosati's bel canto singers, sponsored by the Manhattan Beach Recreation Department, are shown during recent performance at the Hollywood Bowl as part of the summer art and music series. Rosati conducts bel canto classes each Saturday afternoon at the Live Oak Park, 1901 Valley Drive, in Manhattan Beach. He can be contacted at the park for information on the classes.

The Federal Power Commission's denial of a new, independent supply of natural gas for Southern California's battle against air pollution means millions of additional barrels of fuel oil will have to be burned in local steam-electric generating stations.

Southern California Edison Company has pointed this out in a petition mailed to the FPC asking a rehearing of the Gulf Pacific Project case.

The commission rejected the Gulf Pacific Project and certified the so-called "tailored supply program" of the local gas companies in a decision handed down last July 26.

EDISON'S petition points out that the steam electric generating station in Southern California, either existing or under construction, represent investments in excess of $1 billion dollars.

EDISON and the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power use natural gas in their steam-electric generating station when it is available. They had jointly sought a year-round, independent supply through the Gulf Pacific Project.

"The Commission has concluded that higher levels of gas use are not justified for air pollution control reasons." The reasons given for FPC denial of the Gulf Pacific Project also would suggest that the electric utilities should increase depreciation charges and customer rates to keep abreast of the forced "early retirement" of Southern California steam generating station from full service "prophesied" in the Commission's decision, and utilized as a basis for its denial of the Gulf Pacific Project," the petition says.

As a result of the Commission's decision, the petition says "electric utilities serving Southern California must for the future confine their energy resource expansion to coal, nuclear or Pacific Northwest power installations in spite of the limitations on the availability of these resources demonstrated by the record."

Naval Aviation Reserve Officer Candidate Dairi M. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester M. Johnson of 22044 Selwyn St., has completed his first six-weeks summer indoctrination period as an Aviation Reserve Officer Candidate. He was assigned to the U.S. Naval Aviation Schools Command at the Pensacola Naval Air Station.
